CNC President John Bowman Moves to North Island College

A good friend of ASTTBC and strong supporter of technology education and careers, John Bowman, will leave the position of President of the College of New Caledonia in Prince George on July 31, 2013 and take on the position of President at North Island College in Comox/Courtenay.

"I wish John the very best in all that lies ahead," said ASTTBC Executive director, John Leech. "John Bowman has been a strong supporter of technology education and careers and enhancing science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) in our communities and educational offerings." The Applied Science Technologists and Technicians of BC has been working with CNC and other stakeholders to advance awareness of the skills shortages in engineering technology fields and need for new technology programming such as the proposed Civil Engineering Technology program at CNC. "John Bowman will be a great asset to North Island College and the Comox-Courtenay communities," concluded Leech. ASTTBC is a professional association regulating 10,000 engineering and applied science technologists, technicians and technical specialists in BC.
